But it is easy to see that neither the Reception Committee nor any one else can at present say what the order of the programme will be. It may happen that a visit to Canton will take precedence of everything and this the way would be a judicious arrangement, as the Colony would then be able to fix a positive date for the Duke's formal reception, the ball, etc. If Friday next is in truth to witness the arrival said, be sent on somewhat earlier order to commence refitting), it is to be honed that an endeavour will be made to induce His Royal Highness to spend the latter instead of the former portion of his short visit in this Colony. Chinoy, who is charged with having absconded after appropriating bills amounting to $37.50 from his master, was brought up on remand The bills had been entrusted with prisoner for collection; and he disappeared from his employ on the 4th September 1867. Having eturned lately from Bombay, complainant met his old servant in the street, and asked where he had been so long; but the Chinaman refused to recognise him, saying " do not know you." Mr Chinoy, however, had him arrested at once, and on going to the Registrar General's Office, Mr Osmund recognised the boy as complainant's servant. The bills (2 of them) were produced, having been received from the persons who had paid them. - Defendant made a statement which was supposed to embrace his movements for the last two years or more; said he was once in the employ of Mi Johannes, Canton, "a man who wore a large black hat:" and he said he could produce witnesses to show that he was in Mr Chinoy's employ last year. The case was therefore remanded.

In connection with this case, another step has to be reported—viz the discharge of the prisoner under somewhat peculiar circumstances. About half-an-hour after the case had been remanded, as above stated, Mr Chinoy returned with a respectable Uninese merchant, stating that he had made a mistake and charged the wrong man. He had been told so by the respectable Chinese merchant present, whose word he relied upon: and he therefore would not go on farther with the case. His Worship remarked on the conduct of the prosecutor and discharged the boy. The case of robbery of a coil of rope, on auspicion of which offence the four seamen of the Peruvian and the bumboatman were retained on remand, was disposed of topressure speed, as he wants to get out of day.—His Worship remarked that he had consulted the Attorney General on the subject; and as it was his opinion that there was not sufficient evidence to convict the 1st, 2nd, 3rd and 5th prisoners, they were accordingly discharged: The 4th man, how ever, named Wm. Shields (who gave the long confession detailing the robbery), was committed for trial at the next Crimins

INTERPRETING IN COURT To the Editor of the "CHINA MAIL." Sir, May I ask for a space in your columns to make a few remarks relative to subject in which every loyal citizen of this Colony is, or ought to be, deeply

I refer to the subject of interpretation under which, I may say, we suffer, when called to the Supreme Court. 1 would ask if the European Fowers that be have it in their hands to sit in judgment, convict sentence and execute, a Native Criminal and when during such a trial, the Interpreter is the mouth piece of the Judge, Attorney General, Jury, Barristers and Prisoner, as well as, perhaps the most im portant of all—the Witnesses—is it not simple justice to all, as well as the Defend ant, that the Interpreter should be not only man of thorough education, but, speaking of the Hongkong Supreme Court, a thorough and able scholar in both English and Chi nese? In fact, may I not ask if it is not serious misfortune to have it otherwise? I am told that no one superior to the resent incumbent can be procured for the salary allowed, and I am truly surprised that such an utterance can emanate, with support, from the authorities of a Colony which, under its able Ruler, has risen from Sankruptov to comparative affluence, as we are told, in a short three years—and yet a few thousands cannot be spared to remunerate a man of education to act as Interreter in our Courts of Justice. I assert ie latter name is simply a perversion, under the control, as it is, of one who may (!) understand, but cannot pronounce either English or Chinese intelligibly and who, of ecessity, wastes a large portion of valuable ime in eliciting what little evidence the

Let any one carefully study its vast importance and answer to the contrary if he can. Is not the office of sufficient importance and respectability to be filled by some "Pet Lamb," who can give us the benefit of his education during the sittings of the Criminal Court, and at other times be employed in improving his knowledge y the necessary study to perfect himself Or is property, honor, reputation and life itself of so little value that they can be subjected to the power of an incompetent

> NARAIN SING. It appears that Narain Sing, whose name must be familiar to every body acquainted with the incidents of the Sikh War, is still alive at Rangoon, where he is residing in he character of a State detenue, on a pittance of its. 30 a month. Narain has been spoken of as one of the Dewan Moolraj's ieutenants, and in a manner that would lead to the supposition that he took promient part in the defence of Mooltan. But th was not the case, and we believe that olraj exercised no authority whatever ver the man who suddenly started into notoriety in 1848 as a free lasce of very active_character, at the head of a very miscellaneous gathering of some hundreds of Dooabees, every one of whom was as ready and anxious as himself to turn the events of the passing strife to personal as well as olitical advantage; When Mooltan surrendered, this band formed no part of the garrison, but had, under Narain, taken possession of a strong mud fort or fortified village on the banks of the Chenaub several marches from Mooltan, and in a measure commanding the route General Whish's force would have to follow to effect a junction with that of Lord Gough, then retiring from Chilliawallah on Goozerat. It is unnecessary to say that Narain and his band of patriots kept the surrounding country in trebidation, and indeed General Whish expected to have to employ heavy ordinance against their stronghold. Narain, however, wisely resolved not to give the General the trouble, and had everything prepared for surrender on the approach of the British force. When that force did appear found it had nothing to do but to some guards to take possession, most laughable of all, that for weeks previously Narain Sing and his ollowers had been without gunpowder "If such had not been the case," this rather loose-conscienced Punjabes Dalgetty aid, laughingly, to the British General, "I assuredly would not have suffered your oraye army to approach without a salute of tuns in their honour and your!"

But Nar un was sent a prisoner to Lahore, where he was confined in the very same milding as Moolraj, and on the same flat. The bearing of these two men under misfortunate was singularly indicative of their very different antecedents. The one who had been raised up in Oriental luxury, to be suddenly and ignominiously removed from a provincial sovereignty to prison looked a delicate grief-stricken, heart-broken thing, thile Narain, whose antecedents had been "doubtful" that nobody could with certainty say more concerning them, than that they had been adventurous, was a very picture of robusticity, good spirits and funfre one soon aied, and the other was banish. ed to Burmah, where it now appears he still lives, but is anxious to be permitted to return to his native country.
